

Contribution ID: 73

Type: not specified

Science Communication

Monday, 13 December 2021 16:45 (1 hour)

Science Communication

Effective science communication must clearly and succinctly describe the context of scientific work, its importance, and how the results differ from opinion, conjecture, or anecdotal evidence. This lecture will provide with general tips and resources to effectively communicate scientific results. Guidance on how to write a paper and successfully present your latest data at conferences will be given. Some hints on how to use some other non-traditional communications channels will be presented.

Summary

Presenters: PREZADO, Yolanda (Institut Curie, France); PREZADO, yolanda