

The PSI in brief

The Paul Scherrer Institute PSI is a research center for the natural and engineering sciences. At PSI, cutting-edge research is performed in the fields of Matter and Materials, Human Health as well as Energy and Environment. We use fundamental and applied research to work on sustainable solutions for key questions raised in society, science and economy. With the equivalent of about 1500 full-time staff positions, we are the largest research institute in Switzerland. We develop, construct and operate complex large-scale facilities. Every year about 2000 guest scientists from Switzerland and around the world come to us. Just like PSI's own researchers, they use our unique facilities to carry out experiments that are not possible anywhere else.
